Illustrated initial death benefit	Planned premium outlay	Planned payment period	Coverage guarantee
$4,000,000	$38,600 a year	To age 88	To age 121
Paid at the second death	As illustrated; not a guaranteed premium	25 years of planned outlay; ages use the illustration's age basis	Only if premiums and policy activity follow the illustration

Why this proposal is being considered

You told your advisor the purpose is estate liquidity or wealth transfer, so that cash is available when it is needed. The proposal from Example Mutual Life Insurance Company is designed around one death benefit, paid after both of you have died.

How the proposed policy works

When the benefit is paid

Example Survivorship GUL is survivorship universal life insurance. It pays nothing at the first death; the death benefit is paid at the second death, to the policy's beneficiary.

How it is funded

The illustration assumes a planned outlay of $38,600 a year for 25 years, then no further outlays. Charges continue after outlays stop.

GUARANTEED

What is guaranteed

The Survivorship Guarantee keeps the policy from lapsing through the younger insured's age 121, provided every planned premium is paid on time and no loans or withdrawals are taken.

NOT GUARANTEED

What is illustrated, not guaranteed

Cash values assume an interest rate of 4.00% and current charges continue. They are not guaranteed, and this design does not rely on them to keep coverage in force while the guarantee conditions are met.

What to understand before proceeding

1. Payment conditions
   The guarantee to age 121 depends on paying $38,600 on time for the full payment period. A late or short payment can shorten it, and restoring it may require a larger payment.
2. Ownership and tax questions
   Who owns the policy, who receives the benefit, and any estate or tax effects are outside this companion. Confirm the trust arrangements with your attorney or tax adviser.
3. Funding commitment
   The illustration assumes $38,600 a year for 25 years. The trust's funding needs to continue for that whole period; ask your advisor what happens if it changes.
